→ Day 1

The state of digital marketing today

Participants will learn about the role digital marketing plays today and why it matters for brands to be online. We will also review how digital has evolved and debunk commonly held myths.

Digital marketing strategy

Participants will be introduced to the process of developing a digital marketing strategy step-by-step.

Defining your objectives

Participants will be introduced to the marketing funnel and how it is used in planning digital communications. They will also learn how to use it as a tool to identify their objectives and Key Performance Indicators (KPIs).

Defining your target audience

Participants will learn why knowing their audience matters and how to create a useful persona for both B2C and B2B businesses.

Identifying the right channels

Participants will learn about the different channels available, their role in the marketing mix versus offline, their strengths and weaknesses, how they can be leveraged to address challenges in the marketing funnel, how to use them to reach specific target audiences and design a channel strategy.

→ Day 2

Creating great content

Learn what defines great content, why it matters even more in the age of social media and digital and how to create it. As part of this you will review different examples from across industries to identify best practices and develop their own strategies.

Creating a content strategy

Participants will learn how to create and use digital marketing planning tools, such as a content plan and content strategy, as part of their day-to-day marketing operations and strategic long-term planning.

Implementing your strategy

Participants will learn how to set up effective processes and resources to manage their digital marketing and what to look out for to ensure quality communications.

Measuring Success

Participants will learn about the Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) used to track performance in digital and what they can expect from different channels, referring to industry benchmarks.

Putting new skills into practice

Looking at a case study, participants will put their new learnt skills into action by using strategic planning tools to create an effective marketing campaign fit for a digital first world.
